All Star Banquet and Auction

Rooms 4 and 5 were packed with hockey fans last Saturday afternoon. In a room beautifully decorated for the occasion, the All Star Banquet and Auction, the mood was very festive. Everyone was there to welcome our Northwest Hockey League All Star players to their competition that will show whether Alberta or British Columbia is number one in the Northwest Hockey League.

The festivities started off with a 'cocktail' hour and then a wonderful banquet catered by Gail Cameron and her staff. Then it was time for speeches by the dignitaries assembled and an introduction of each of the players to the assemblage.

After that the auction was held and autographed pictures, jerseys and sports trading cards were auctioned off for everyone to bid on.

The occasion was brought to you by The District of Tumbler Ridge, Tumbler Ridge Inn, ShopEasy Foods, City Sports of Dawson Creek, Stardust Creations, Molson Canada, Safeway, and the Tumbler Ridge Computer Centre.

Hockey Fans Take Note

by S. K. Jones

The weekend of Jan. 24-26 1997, TR is hosting the Annual PeeWee Minor Hockey Tournament. If you want to see some exciting hockey, come on out and support the kids. PeeWee level hockey can have you involved in the play and on the edge of your seat! Put two competitive teams on the ice and there's rivalry and contention for those desired goals! Admission is by donation this year. There will be a door prize and draws. So come down to the arena, bring the kids and check out the action. Posters will be put up giving game times.

See you there!

OPINION OBSERVER

Editorial

by Kathy Cope

A few days ago two of my children were sledding on the sledding hill across from Willow Rd on Monkman Way. They were busy with a few friends and a variety of other children sledding down the hill and climbing back up again. But, someone joined the group and without a sled. An adult brought along his snowmobile and proceeded to go up and down the sledding hill with it. Weaving in and out of the children sledding on that hill. Not what most people would call a 'bright' idea.

After checking with the RCMP I found out that this is perfectly legal, because there is no bylaw stating that snowmobiles are not allowed in this part of town.

After checking with District staff I am told that although there is no bylaw stating this is not acceptable. There are signs, maps, etc. stating that this is not a snowmobile area.

There are corridors for those who want to take their snowmobiles out of town and ride them. The District has been very understanding about the use of snowmobiles in town. Most snowmobile owners trailer their machines and take them out of town before riding them. Not everyone has this capability, nor do they want to ride them way out of town. That is understandable. If you are just going to the trails behind the Heritage Highway and live on Gwillim Crescent or elsewhere up top you might just want to take your machine out your backyard and then drive it to the trail system. Rather than trailing it and driving it to a drop off place.

But driving a snowmobile along the berms beside Mackenzie or Monkman, driving over the Golf Course, or down the sledding hill, or across the fields at TRE are not suitable activities for responsible drivers and if this keeps up those people without snowmobiles are going to be petitioning the District to have them banned from town. It is only a matter of time before a backlash of pent up anger kicks in and everyone will lose the use of their snowmobiles, unless you have that truck and/ or trailer to take it out of town to use it. Please snowmobile responsibly and think of the others residents and especially the children when you are out and about.

By the way, whoever let those three children snowmobile by themselves at 8 PM on Saturday night was not being a very responsible parent, and they are not allowed to cross the street the way that they did

Lets Talk Taxes

A weekly commentary by the Canadian Taxpayers Federation Throwing Some Light on MLA

Pay - Part 1 Appointed by an all-party standing committee of the legislature, a five-member Citizens' Panel is currently reviewing MLA compensation and expenses. The Panel's recommendations are expected to be completed by the end of this month.

Hopefully, the Panel's efforts will result in a comprehensive set of reforms. Currently, change only occurs when someone embarrasses MLAs into taking action. Like pointing out that upon leaving office MLAs could keep, as their personal property, all the taxpayer-provided office furnishings and equipment from their constituency offices. That was dropped in 1995. Or pointing out that taxpayers were contributing, on average, $5 for every $1 contributed by an MLA to their pension plan. The pension plan, which was abolished in May 1996, didn't stop several departing MLAs from walking away with millions, but it did stop future MLAs from robbing the treasury with the same vigour as their predecessors.

It has been argued repeatedly that pensions and benefits like the clean office policy compensated like the clean office policy compensated for low salaries. Indeed, former Premier Mike Harcourt makes this point in his memoirs. In turth however, these so-called benefits were only a way of increasing compensation while misleading the public and avoiding the political backlash associated with more visible salary increases.

If the Citizens' Panel recommends anything, it should be that MLA compensation become transparent. Professor Wally Fox-Decent, who headed a similar commission in Manitoba, aptly summarized the point: "any system of remuneration for MLAs should be simple, straightforward, easily understandable, fair and accountable". But the current system in B.C. is like something cooked up by Stupich-type accountants and Laxton-type lawyers.

And its not just pensions and cleaning out the office -- even something as simple as a salary is muddled in chicanery. Currently, MLAs receive a taxable "indemnity" of $32,812 in addition to a "tax-free allowance" of $16,406 which is equal to half the indemnity. Politicians and commentators often combine the two to imply that MLAs are paid a base salary of $49,218. Once the full effects of the tax free allowance are taken into account, MLAs pay is 1% below the national average when compared to all other provinces, while cabinet ministers are 3% above the national average. In other words, election officials in British Columbia are not contrary to popular belief, among the lowest paid in the country.

Transparency is important not just for taxpayers who haven't been receiving the straight goods for decades, but also for elected officials. Tax-free allowances, for ex ample, shelter politicians from the effects of the tax decisions they im pose upon the public. Moving to fully-taxable and transparent salary would mean that Premier Clark would be subject to the highes marginal tax rate in North America Something he imposed upon th public as Finance Minister, but i insulated from thanks to a specia tax break for politicians. Trans parency is the precursor and guiding principle to all other discussion surrounding changes to MLA com pensation. More about this in nex week's column.

MP Report

by Jay Hill, Prince George -Peace River

My Ottawa assistant told me her young son came home from school recently and told her there had been an altercation in the school yard. Apparently one young boy called another a liar, whereupon the accused asked him who he thought he was talking to, "the Prime Minister?"

Although I can't help but smile at the flood of cartoons, one-liners and jokes circulating about "Teflon Jean", every new disclosure of another "untruth" or broken promise by the Liberals only increases Canadians' contempt for politicians at all levels of government.

Case in point, the recent capitulation of the Liberal government on the Mulroney lawsuit. It seems there is not sufficient evidence of Mr. Mulroney's guilt, at least not at this time. So, rather than jeopardize the ongoing investigation, taxpayers will generously pick up Brian's legal bills in addition to the government's. Reportedly, the total could run upwards of three million dollars.

Does anyone really believe charges will ever be laid in this case? In fact, if the appointment of former PM Kim Campbell to her Hollywood mansion is any indication, I'll wager there is a far better chance PM Chretien will give Mulroney a special assignment in the Bahamas before he'll ever be charged in the Airbus scandal.

It seems that among those (including Reformers) calling for the resignation of Justice Minister Allan Rock over this $13 million debacle is none other than the Tory leader, Jean Charest, a former Mulroney Cabinet Minister. I guess he should know what constitutes a breach of Ministerial standards of accountability and conduct, having had to resign in 1990 himself for calling a judge on a matter before the court. Of course, he only had to sit on the backbenches for a short time before he was reinstated. Shades of Moe Sihota!

Have you noticed that lately the national media have been falling all over themselves to place Mr. Charest front and centre in every "national" news story while carefully avoiding any mention of Reformers? Is is an intentional strategy leading up to the next crucial election? Why would they adopt such a policy?

Is it because, just as they did during the Charlottetown Accord when they pushed Mulroney's line that "anyone who votes No is an enemy of Canada", the national media has decided it again "knows" what's best for you? Maybe they should remember that, in 1992, 76.2% of the people in this riding voted No, despite dire warnings from media pundits.

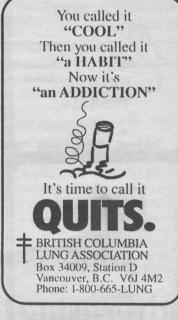

The media suggests polls indicate the decline of the Reform Party as more and more small "c" conservatives return to the Tories. Well, I don't know where they're conducting these polls, but I know it's not in our riding. A TeleResearch poll done here last September showed just six percent of decided voters would vote Tory - this in a constituency that was a Conservative stronghold for 20 years.

Obviously, people here are not buying Mr. Charest's new and improved Tory party. Despite their promotion of Mr. Charest, even the national media concedes they have yet to uncover any new policy initiatives. One wonders, will the next election be another popularity contest or will it be fought on policy?

I believe Mr. Charest and his Progressive Conservatives have a lot of work ahead of them before Canadians are going to begin to forgive or forget the Mulroney era. But rest assured, in order to try to split the Reform vote, the national media and the Liberal government will do everything they can to convince you to have a "short memory" when it comes to voting Tory! Any working British Columbian with an income of $49,218 would be required by law to pay $14,051 in federal and provincial income taxes. But since $16,406 of an MLA's income is non-taxable, they only have to pay $7,418 on the same income -- 47% less than taxpayers earning the same income. In effect, MLAs receive a $6,633 tax break.

Not true

Anybody else would have to earn $61,050 to receive the same aftertax income as an MLA earning $49,218. Cabinet Ministers, who currently earn $88,218 are really earning an equivalent of $107,176 considering their generous tax break.

Art gallery opens Tumbler show

By Cees Mond Daily News Staff

Of People and Nature, the new exhibit at the Dawson Creek Art Gallery, provides a window into Tumbler Ridge's landscape and its people.

By means of two essentially different mediums, two Tumbler Ridge artists, Ron Lukey and Denise Linley, explore the balance of nature to man and industry.

Linley's chalk, pen and ink, acrylic and oil paintings depict nature and animals of Tumbler Ridge's surroundings. The uniqueness of some of the works lies in the fact. she doesn't separate heavy industry from the natural surroundings in which it is placed. One notable piece is a painting of deer grazing with the majestic Rocky Mountains in the background. From behind the hills the impressive towers of Quintette coal mine provide a unique sense of co-existence.

"I wanted to show wildlife interacting with the mine," says Linley. "I'm interested in the mine, in the way it fits in the landscape.'

The Quintette mine has done a remarkable job in preserving the landscape and its wildlife, she says.

"I always say, 'if you want to see wildlife, go to the mine.' Once I had the opportunity to take a look at the actual mining site. In the space of two hours, I saw a black bear, an elk, osprey, two cow moose with three calves, and a grizzly with cubs."

Though born and raised in Vancouver, the mainly self-taught artist Linley has lived in northern B.C. since 1990, the last two years in Tumbler Ridge.

Lukey, a resident of the mining town since 12 years, is featured at the show through high contrast black and white photographs.

The Saskatchewan native, who works at the Quintette mine as an electrician, chose to have only his pictures representing the various facets of the mine and its people at the exhibition.

It gives the viewer not only some visual insights into the everyday workings within the mine, but his work may be the industry's strongest promotional tool.

By photographing interesting looking rock formations with large equipment working in the foreground, Lukey manages to put some poetry into the industry.

The way Lukey pictures his coworkers, with mining equipment in the background, gives the subjects a sense of pride and makes the powerful features of the mine come alive.

"A lot of people have worked 10 or 15 years at the mine, and yet have no (photographic) record of their work," says Lukey. "There are lots of great pictures out there."

With a wide angle lens, he creeps up close to the subject while still capturing as much of the background as possible, thus blending in the people in their environment instead of separating the two.

Lukey, who learned about photography as a child in his father's camera/photo business, only started to become interested again in the medium after the birth of his first child, six years ago.

How can you change a piece of chocolate into a vegetable? You toss it into the air and it comes down squash.

If corns have ears and potatoes have eyes, what do chocolates have? Each other.

What did the snake give his girlfriend on their first date? A good-night hiss.

Grow sprouts in an eggshell: You'll need: 1 empty eggshell with top 1/4 broken off, 1 egg cup or small napkin ring, 3 damp cotton balls, 1/8 teaspoon alfalfa seeds, fine-tipped felt markers. Set the empty eggshell in egg cup or napkin ring. Draw a face on the eggshell with coloured markers (a child's self-portrait is especially fun), and set the eggshell in egg cup or napkin ring. Place damp cotton balls inside eggshell. Sprinkle seeds over the cotton and keep cotton damp. In two or three days, the seeds will begin to sprout. Put in a sunny spot. As the seeds grow, the children can give their egg friend a 'hair' cut. Sprinkle the nutritious clippings on a salad or add to a sandwich at lunch time.

From Council This letter was received by our the letter

Council and appeared in the last Council package. Dear Mayor Kealy and Council-

I am writing to you today regardng a matter of serious concern to people throughout this province.

As I am sure you are aware, this povernment has recently taken acion to cut the provincial share of he municipal grants by, in some cases, up to 60%. This action is a lirection violation of Section 2 of he Local Governments Grants Act, which prohibits the government rom reducing grants in an one fisal year by more than 2% of the revious year's grant.

It is apparent that this governnent, having tabled a fraudulent udget, is now enacting policy that iolates the laws of the Province. I ave enclosed, for your information, the letter which I wrote to Lieutenant-Governor Garde Gardom. I have urged him to recall the Legislature so the appropriate amending legislation can be brought forward and debated, thus allowing both the elected officials and the public a chance to hear discussion about and propose changes to this new grants scheme.

I urge you to express to the Premier your outrage about the illegal and undemocratic actions of his government. I am most interested in any information or opinions you may have on how this issue will effect your community. Please do not hesitate to write or phone my office in Victoria. Sincerely, Gordon F.D. Wilson, MLA, Leader, Progressive Democratic Alliance.

Alcoholism, chronic and usually progressive illness involving the excessive inappropriate ingestion of ethyl alcohol, whether in the form of familiar alcoholic beverages or as a constituent of other substances. Alcoholism is thought to arise from a combination of a wide range of physiological, psychological, social and genetic factors. It is characterized by an emotional and often physical dependence on alcohol, and it frequently leads to brain damage or early death.

Some 10% of the adult drinkers in the US and Canada are considered alcoholics or at least they experience drinking problems to some degree. More males than females are affected, but drinking among the young and among women is increasing. Consumption of alcohol is apparently on the rise in the United States, countries of the former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and many European nations. This is paralleled by growing evidence of increasing numbers of alchol-related problems in other nations, including the Third World.

ety Your Credit Bureau File Would you like to know what is in your file at the Credit Bureau? The Credit Reporting Act gives you the right to know and to make corrections. If you look in the yellow pages under Credit Reporting Agencies you will find the following number for the Credit Bureau: 1-800-565-5390. This is the Credit Bureau of Vancouver and they are the branch of Equifax which covers our area. You can request that the Credit Bureau read your file to you after you properly identify yourself. If you want a copy of the file, you will have to send them a letter which has been witnessed by a commissioner of oaths or notary public which establishes your identity. They are also required to disclose the names of all people who have received a report within the preceding 12 months together with copies of the reports provided to them.

When are entries in your file erased? Entries in your file are automatically erased after six years but this may vary depending on the type of activity on the debt. You are best to check this with the Credit Bureau.

Who has access to your file? A report on your credit can by given only to persons who have a direct business involvement. This includes landlords and employers. Before they may obtain a report, they must have your consent in writing or notify you by mail within 3 days of receiving the report.

Correcting your File: Suppose you have a good reason why a debt has not been paid, for instance, the book you ordered did not arrive but the bill did. You may take the following steps: 1) You have the right to send an explanation in writing (try to keep it under 50 words). This statement must be given to anyone who obtains a report in the future. 2) You also have the right to dispute in writing any information in your file (try to keep it under 50 words). The Credit Bureau then has an obligation to investigate and use its best efforts to confirm the disputed information. Again, this statement must be included in your report in the future. 3) Ask the Credit Bureau to report back to you as to the outcome of their investigation. 4) If you are not satisfied with the outcome, you can contact the Debtor Assistance Branch of Consumer Affairs which licenses the Credit Bureau by calling Enquiry BC at 1-800-663-7867 and asking for 387-1747. They have a broad range of investigative powers and if they find in your favour they can order the Credit Bureau to amend your file. 5) If you file is amended, the Credit Bureau must provide notification of the amendment to every person to whom a report was given within one year before the amendment.

If you are having problems with debt, consumer, landlord/ tenant, family, criminal, welfare, U.I.C., pensions, small claims, W.C.B., etc., call Legal Services at 782-7366.

The Tumbler Ridge Chamber of ommerce presented Carol illiams, owner of Williams riety and Sears Agency with the 96 Customer Service Award. rol has been providing Tumbler dge residents with a friendly nile, a kind ear and good service r approximately 8 years. ustomers who completed the rvey for Williams Variety mmented on the good prices, iendly service and the fact that arol - goes that extra mile!

all businesses who promoted the project and the 217 customers who took the time to complete the survey. Those who completed the survey were generally very pleased with the quality of service provided by our merchants.

ile, a kind ear and good service approximately 8 years. stomers who completed the vey for Williams Variety mented on the good prices, endly service and the fact that rol - goes that extra mile! The Chamber would like to thank greater selection of men's and women's clothing. There was no strong indication which is of more importance when shopping but price had a slight edge over service, selection or quality. Respondents indicated that selection and price are the prime reasons for shopping out of town. The survey clearly indicated that no particular day is the primary shopping day and the majority of respondents did not answer whether they were satisfied with store hours.

A complete summary of the data is available at the Chamber office.

British Home Office Secretary eter Darwin was hoping for a few eeks off before starting his next ssignment at Whitehall. While isiting a friend in Miami he meets ouple Vicky and Greg off to meet er daughter and fiancee in loucestershire, England, Peter's ome town. Peter comes along to elp out when Vicky and Greg are nugged just before leaving for England. Peter then meets future sonin-law Ken, a vet, whom Peter's mother was very fond of Ken's father, Kenny. Ken's having a problem with dead horses, it seems that the majority of his patients are dying and Peter is out to find out why. With a string of valuable racehorses winding up dead and the police and racing commission unable to intervene it is up to Peter Darwin to find out what is going on in is old home town.
